

The image shows a page from a handwritten church register. A red rectangular box highlights the top section, which contains entries for the year 1729. The entries are written in cursive and include names, dates, and descriptions of events. To the right of the text, there are columns for numerical data, likely representing costs or fees. The year 1730 is written in the center of the page. The right side of the page shows the beginning of another column of entries.
